

A Governor's Revenge.

An extraordinary shooting affair between women, which is not without interest for the English colony in Paris, took place on the avenue Kleber. Mme. Quinlet, a former governess, fired three times on Mme. Carola Gratix, the keeper of a lodging house, No. 82 rue Lauriston.

The circumstances which have led up to this regrettable affair are at present involved in a good deal of mystery. Mme. Quinlet is 55 years of age. She has for a long time inhabited England, where she was the governess of the children of Lord Dufferin. For a number of years she has been a widow. She has one child, a daughter, on whom she has lavished all her care. The girl is now 27 years of age, and when last with her mother Mme. Quinlet was reported to have an excellent education and a good style. But she was in feeble health, the climate of England did not suit her, and had to bear through the separation was, Mme. Quinlet sent her daughter over to Paris and put her under the care of Mme. Carola Gratix.

A year later Mme. Quinlet found that her income was sufficiently large to allow of her discontinuing work. She left London and came to live in Paris.

Here the mysterious part of the story commences. Mme. Quinlet could not obtain an interview with her daughter, who obstinately refused to leave the boarding house. The poor mother tried all means to see her daughter. She complained that the affections of Mme. Quinlet had been turned from her through the influence of the other hand. Mme. Gratix, on the other hand, declares that far from detaining Mme. Quinlet, the latter did not wish to leave the house where she had always been the object of such affectionate care. Besides, she said, Mme. Quinlet was no longer a minor and had not to receive orders from any one.

Such was the situation when Mme. Quinlet met Mme. Gratix in the Avenue Kleber. There was a violent quarrel between the two women, at the end of which Mme. Quinlet drew a revolver from her pocket and fired three shots at Mme. Gratix, whom she accused of having caused the misery of her life.

Only one ball struck Mme. Gratix. The wound was only a slight one and after first aid had been administered in a chemist's shop Mme. Gratix was taken to her home.

Mme. Quinlet was arrested.—European edition of the N. Y. Herald.
